

≡ PARTICIPATION! / EXPLOITATION? ≡

a micro-conference on the possibilities and risks
of mediated participation today

New forms of mediated participation are everywhere. From fan fiction to crowdsourcing to revolutions in north Africa. But do they liberate or do they exploit? How can we critically engage with the changing forms and functions of participation, democratization and citizenship?

Contributors will present research projects in a rapid-fire format designed to raise questions, make new connections, share skills, methods and approaches and debate the nature of participation today.

Friday, 16 March 2012

12-4pm

Charles E. Young Library

Presentation Room

UCLA

👤: Melissa M. Brough (USC Annenberg), Roderic Crooks (UCLA Information Studies), Morgan Currie (UCLA Information Studies), Kevin Driscoll (USC Annenberg), Adam Fish (UCLA Anthropology), Lilly Irani (UCI Informatics), David Leonard (UCLA Design Media Arts), Alex Leavitt (USC Annenberg), Adam Liszkiewicz [w/ Maya Abood, Chris Rowe and Craig Dietrich] (USC Media Arts and Practice), Alexandra Lippman (UCI Anthropology), Chris Reilly (UCLA Design Media Arts), Luis Felipe Rosado Murillo (UCLA Anthropology), Andrew Schrock (USC Annenberg), Lana Swartz (USC Annenberg), Neta Kligler Vilenchik (USC Annenberg)

👤: Ed Walker (UCLA Sociology)

👤: Christopher M. Kelty (UCLA Information Studies/Anthropology)

Sponsored in part by:

